

“Tookie was one of the smartest kids in school, and his favorite subject was math. No matter what he was doing, he would always use numbers. When he went to lunch, he would count how many items he had on his green little tray ...”

You are invited to a celebratory reading of the work from the

Children’s Storybook Project

a partnership of Gemini Ink and the Cyndi Taylor Krier

Juvenile Correctional Treatment Center

“When Tookie was dropped off at home, he would count the white stone steps that led to the front door. This continued until his seventh birthday, when Tookie suddenly became tired of counting...”

Monday, November 19, 6 pm
at Gemini Ink, 513 S. Presa

“Everything he looked at became numbers, and he couldn’t stop counting them. Tookie wished he could feel what it was like to not be able to count.”

Working with writer-in-residence Xelena Gonzalez, young authors at the Krier Center have written a collection of children’s stories soon to be published by Gemini Ink and distributed to teen parents in Methodist Healthcare Ministry’s MELD program to encourage reading to their children. The Children’s Storybook Project enhances literacy and communication skills, builds self-esteem, and offers at-risk youth an opportunity to make a creative contribution to their community. Please join us in celebrating their achievement!

The Children’s Storybook Project is made possible with the generous support of the Verizon Communications, The Alice K. Reynolds Foundation, Ford Salute to Education, and Methodist Healthcare Ministries.
